16th November 2021

Dear Parents and Carers

On the forthcoming 'Extended Project Day' on Wednesday 24th November the students have Geography all day. We would like to use the day to practise some of the investigative, analytical and statistical skills that students will need to be competent at by the time they take their final GCSE examinations.

We will therefore be examining weathering processes and soils. It is important that students have a fundamental understanding of these two topics before they look in more depth at other physical geography units later on in the course. They will select and carry out appropriate data collection techniques in the field, present data in a variety of ways, including using statistical tests and analyse findings fully including an accurate conclusion and evaluation.

Although students will complete quite a lot of investigative tasks in the classroom, we will be walking to Middleton Cheney churchyard to look at the impact of weathering processes on different rock types.

Students should bring a coat for the fieldwork. Lunch break times will not be disturbed.

Yours sincerely

Mrs E Taylor
Head of Geography
